Thy timid beauty charm'd me first ;
I breath'd a Lover's vows ;
But little thought to find the friend
Whose strength sustains me now.
I deem'd thee made for summer skies,
But in the stormy sea,
Deserted by all other friends
Dear love, I turn to thee.

Should e'er some keener sorrow throw
A shadow o'er my mind;
And should I thoughtless, breath to thee,
One word that is unkind;
For give it Love! thy smile will set
My better feelings free;
And with a look of boundless love,
I still shall turn to thee.
